Native speakers and heritage speakers

*No credit given to native speakers for 20000-level Spanish; heritage speakers may only receive credit with permission of the department chair. A native speaker is considered someone who completed their primary or secondary education in a Spanish-speaking country. A heritage speaker is someone who was primarily educated in U.S. schools but who speaks Spanish in the home and with friends and co-workers. Native speakers and heritage speakers not eligible to take these courses must take additional upper-level Spanish electives instead unless these credits are awarded as transfer credit or Advanced Placement credit.

Native speakers will not receive credit for SPAN 30503, SPAN 30603, and SPAN 31703 unless special permission is granted by department chair. Heritage speakers are encouraged to take SPAN 31703. Non-heritage speakers should not take SPAN 31703. Native speakers and heritage speakers not eligible to take these courses must take additional upper-level Spanish electives instead.
